

Mrs. Charles Molander, who, when she lived in DeKalb was known as Mary Hiland, died at her home in Chicago last Wednesday. Mary lived here a number of years and was a familiar figure around the Glidden House where her obliging disposition and unfailing good temper made her exceedingly popular. Never very strong since her marriage some two or three years ago her health failed steadily until death came to end her suffering. The news of her death will give pain to many in this vicinity as she had a wide acquaintance and was well liked by all. Funeral services occurred Thursday afternoon in Chicago and there the remains were interred.
